

Multisyllable Word Slips

Consonant-le Syllables

Ideas

The student can:

- Work on 5 or 10 slips, study the words and bring them to a teach for a “pop quiz;”
- Read the word and put it in a sentence;
- Work on 5 or 10 slips and prepare for a spelling quiz.
- Ask another student a question, the answer to which is the ‘mystery’ word on the slip.

The teacher can:

- Focus on the words as new vocabulary;
- Focus on the syllable type and discuss why a vowel is saying it's sound or why a consonant must be placed in a particular syllable frame;
- Laminate the word study slips and provide dry-erase markers to create a non-consumable, reusable material.

Note

C-le teams are found only at the ends of words. A double consonant often—but not always—occurs when a C-le syllable is combined with a closed syllable (bubble, simple). If a C-le syllable is combined with an open syllable (cable, cradle), there will not be a double consonant.

scramble

Choose a slip from a basket or tray.

scramble

Underline the vowels. (You may choose to consider the consonant + l + e as a vowel unit.)

scramble

Write the vowels in the syllable frames. (You may choose to consider the consonant + l + e as a vowel unit.)

scramble

Bring down the consonants and begins to figure out how they can be placed to create a recognizable word.

scramble

Read and study the word printed on the back of the slip.

A Benefit of Multisyllable Word Study

Students will begin to recognize common syllable chunks before they know what the word is. This helps speed the process of decoding and leads to great accuracy and fluency.
